

Employment Discrimination of Romani People in Bosnia and Herzegovina

Emir Čičkušić

International Burch University, Sarajevo, Bosnia and Herzegovina
ecickusic@hotmail.com

Nataša Tandir

International Burch University, Sarajevo, Bosnia and Herzegovina
ntandir@ibu.edu.ba

The Romani are an ethnic group living mostly in Europe originating from the northwestern Indian Subcontinent. Romani are widely known in the English-speaking world by the exonym "Gypsies". There are no certain data about total population of the Romani people all around the world but it is assumed it estimates from 2 million to more than 12 million. In Bosnia and Herzegovina approximately there are 80,000 of Romani people which were faced with much discrimination during their life mostly on field of education, employment and health care. This research should provide insight how much Romani people are discriminated when applying to a job. Research has been undertaken with the survey which was shared among the Romani people groups, relevant NGOs, and representatives of local communities who are dealing with the problems of minorities. Results can be used to show how largest minority in Bosnia and Herzegovina is facing discrimination in any aspect each day, especially in professional life.

Keywords: Romani People, Employment Discrimination, Bosnia and Herzegovina.